

Internet Use Policy for Government Information

The Brooks Library is a depository for materials published by U.S. and Washington State Government agencies in all formats.

Although computers throughout the Brooks Library may be used to connect to the Internet, workstations are available in Government Publications & Current Periodicals on the third floor that may be used to access government resources published on the Internet.

A login is required on these workstations. Users without campus computer accounts must ask to be logged in by the person staffing the Government Publications & Current Periodicals service desk

All users of computer workstations are expected to comply with the Brooks Library's Public Computer Use Policy.
